OVERSIZED IS BIG

What someone wears is indicated by their personality. The spectrum from comfort to class varied dramatically during the weeks of education.

Girls and guys sported a comfortable look this year. You could find girls in Victoria's Secret PINK mix-and-match sweatpants and tees. Guys wore American Eagle pajamas (or gym shorts) and a comfortable t-shirt. Who really wanted to get dressy in an Ordway classroom at 8 a.m.? On the other hand, the professional atmosphere of some classrooms and "pin attire" for the Greek community consituted a classier look, from business casual (slacks, button down shirt) to high class (suit and tie).

Black and white was a huge fad; girls would wear black or white nail polish, dresses, shirts, or bottoms. Color forecasting group CMG (www.colormarketing.org) selected shades of aquious and rubino as the year's predicted hot colors.

As far as accessories go, oversized was big. Big sunglasses and oversized tote bags ("totes") dominated the entire year. In the fall, chunky jewelry was in, but the spring brought an infatuation with sleek silver pieces. Guys were no exception. Golf caps and watches with an oversized wrist band made an appearance on a daily basis.

For shoes, the big deal was stiletto heels for formal events, and ballerina flats or comfortable flip-flops for day to day.

No matter what the trend was, Mocs always kept up with the latest. Anything big and bold decorated the students of FSC.

EMILY PALADINO wears a layered tank and minidress, leggings, and flats. Her hair is done up with a poof, a term that she and her hallmates in JR used as the name of their intramural sports team. Paladino's fashion sense was seemingly always on point, and for it, she was noticed by her classmates every day. Photo by Alicia Marshall

ADVANCING technology

Our virtual world has gone far beyond the spoken word; life in 2007 was typed in Facebook wall-posts, MySpace comments, e-mails and text messages. Flatscreen TVs and computer screens made their debut in residence halls. Technology was advancing.

With the digital age among us, academia had changed. Digging in old journals and reading endless amounts of books was unheard of in 2007.

Students simply searched Google to find resources for research papers.

Our generation was known for its dependency on technology, and computers offered instantaneous results.

FSC Portal offered a way to stay in contact with professors and maintain a relationship with each classmate in case questions about the course needed to be answered.

To accomodate FSC's growing need to technology centers, senior Christine Franklin and Dr. Kerr, with the help of many generous donors, architects, and interior designers, created a Cyber Cafe in the library. Tutu's was a place where students could get coffee and use computers.

Though new technology was prevalent in all forms, the student population had an infatuation with iPods the most, and it could be seen around campus every day.

MAURICE HAWKES, PATRICK SIMMONS, AND SARAH MCDOWELL pass time before lunch listening to iPods and goofing around. Both Hawkes and Simmons listened to their iPods daily.

TV SHOWS MOVIES

room is a hot spot for viewing 2007 movies and TV shows. She has a Dell laptop, a 27 inch flat panel television with the generic Florida Southern cable hook up sitting atop a DVD/VHS player. Across from the entertainment center was a lush couch. Friends could come in any time to watch movies or TV shows such as E! True Hollywood Story or Grey's Anatomy.

Bringing in the Welcome Wagon

Life at Florida Southern was just beginning. The to-do list for the new student was pay tuition: check; receive first schedule: check; make contact with the new "roomie": check. The last checklist item? Make the transition from high school graduate to college freshman. For some, coming to college was a very different experience from high school; the close-knit atmosphere of Florida Southern's finest was different, but still shined through the Peer Leaders, faculty, and staff. Peer leaders were a huge influence on how new students perceived FSC life. Orientation was awkward, but the peer leaders made it fun.

Sig1.indd 12 3/28/07 5:42:36 PM

After checking in with their assigned Peer Leader, students headed over to their residence halls, where they got to meet and greet the Greek community as they helped move them in. Orientation lasted three days, and it was jammed full of information. After parents were successfully vanquished from campus, the real fun began, as new students made new friends.

Peer Leaders

As the first people that the freshmen meet when they come to Florida Southern, the Peer Leaders of the Orientation Staff are a welcoming face to a nerve-wracking situation. The freshmen spent four days with their Peer Leader and group, meeting each day for numerous activities including: a game night, a campus tour, meals with their group, interactive student and faculty panels, and much more. The Peer Leaders act as a mother or father figure for the incoming students to ease their transition and help with the anxiety of moving on to the next chapter of their lives.

New Residential Life Center Groundbreaking

FSC alumni Barney and Carol Barnett donated a generous amount of money for two residence halls that would replace the Panhellenic dorms along the shore of Lake Hollingsworth. The two western-most houses were torn down early in the summer of 2006. Following convocation in September, a groundbreaking ceremony took place. Barbeque was served to students and faculty who attended history in the making.

Freshmen Convocation

Over the summer, all freshmen were required to read Tracy Kidder's novel about Dr. Paul Farmer's life and works. At the Freshmen Convocation, students were able to meet the author. While some students commented that they wished Kidder had spoken more about himself, many others were impressed with his enthusiasm and dedication to Dr. Paul Farmer. In his speech to the students, he emphasized the idea that it is not too late for us to change the world for the better, much like Paul Farmer.

Tracy Kidder Book Signing

Each year, incoming freshmen students are required to read an assigned book before coming to Florida Southern College. This year a book titled Mountains beyond Mountains by Tracy Kidder was selected. For three consecutive years, FSC has provided the students with the opportunity to meet the author in person. Tracy Kidder made a presentation to the students giving them his insights to the book.

Salsa Dancing

Starting out the year on the right foot, the Association of Campus Entertainment hosted a salsa dancing lesson for students in September. The room was filled with festive music as the entertaining instructor and his partner taught the basic steps, Los Angeles style. By the end of the evening, everyone was having fun whether they were dancing like the pros or laughing at their attempts to follow the music's beat.

Hispanic Celebration

A night of live music and good food was perfect for celebrating Hispanic traditions. The event was put on by the International Student Association in the Thrift Alumni Room on September 22. The room was decorated with colorful streamers, balloons, and tablecloths. And as the night progressed, nearly everyone was dancing, since it was hard not to dance to the beat of the music. One student, Jessica Brooks, commented, "It was a good idea that a Hispanic Celebration was put together. And the food was great." By bringing this new and original celebration to Florida Southern College we can embrace new and old cultures with open arms.

Step-Up

To kick off Greek Week, students were invited to attend "Step Up," which showcased the Phi Beta Sigma Men from UCF and USF, as well as the all-girl step team from Lakeland's very own George Jenkins High School. The teams wowed the audience with their stepping skills. Students even persuaded Dr. Kerr to get on stage and show off her moves. The ladies of Rated Next also performed and got the crowd revved up for the Step Teams. Step up was a huge success, and after the show, students were invited on stage to learn some simple moves from the Phi Beta Sigma's.

Multi-Cultural Barbeque

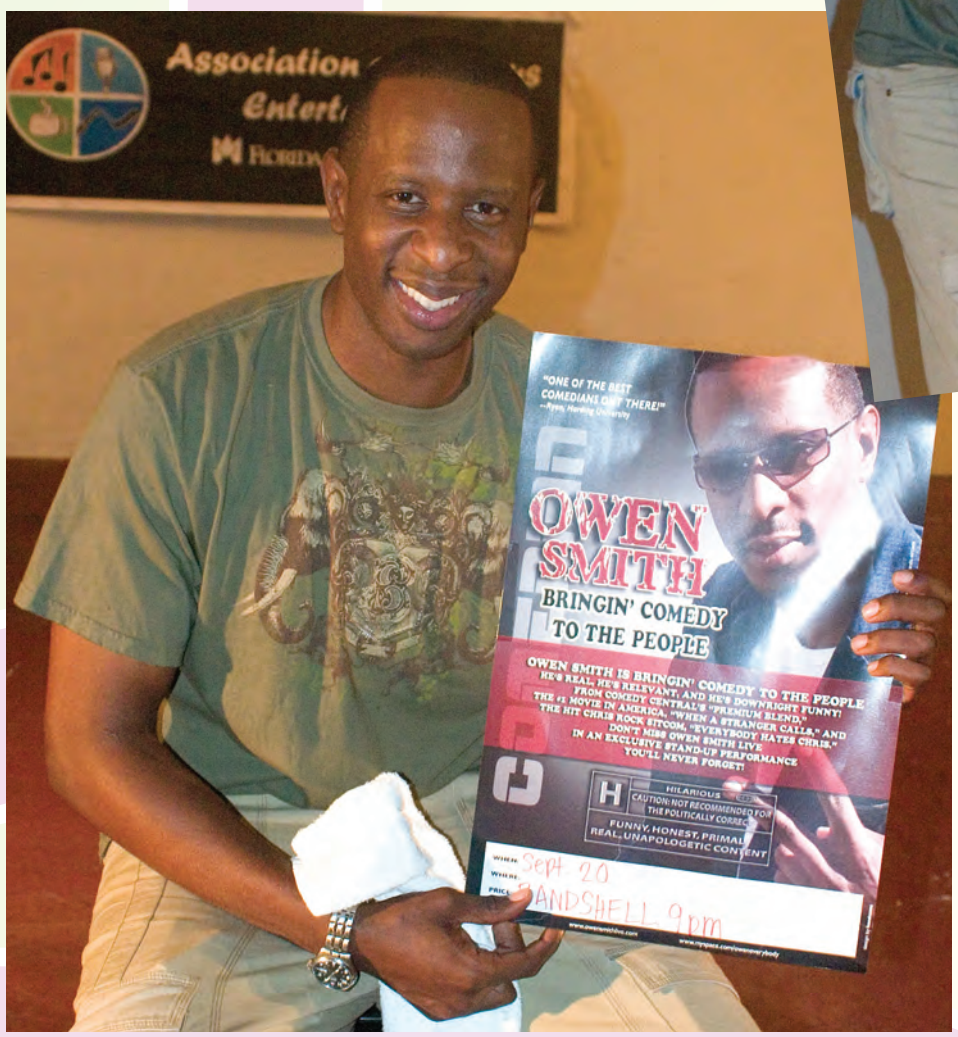

FSC's multicultural students gathered to celebrate all the things which make this country great–different cultures getting together and learning from each other. There were massive amounts of hamburgers and hotdogs and the lemonade flowed freely. The overall atmosphere was excited and enthusiastic. "I love that this school has so many different cultures present. It just feels so accepting," said freshman, Kimberly Karalius.

Comedian Owen Wilson

All of the comedians who visit FSC campus are special in their own ways. Owen Wilson was no different. He was extremely up–beat and kept the students laughing through the whole evening. "That was great," breathed Kaylee Mangold between fits of giggles. "Its funny because its true," commented Shay Lessman when Wilson made numerous jokes about life as a student on campus.

Kite Flying

Who said flying a kite was for kids? A gusty Saturday afternoon compelled students, and even Student Life Coordinator Jason Finney, to take a break from studying and step into Florida's promised warm weather. After several tries, the kite went flying into the air over Lake Hollingsworth for everyone to see. The sun set and the weather went from bearable to 'I need a sweatshirt!'

Forensic Tournament

The FSC Forensic Society hosted thier first "Child of the Sun" Invitational forensic tournament on campus, bringing in competitors from regional colleges and universities. Participants compete in up to 11 events in three broad categories of Limited Preparation, Public Address and Dramatic Interpretation. The director of the Foresic Society, Dr. Chris Fenner says, "We are working to make this an annual event." The funding that the team received from local businessman C.C. "Doc" Dockery will provide for the team to travel and compete alongside larger institutions.

Florida Public Relations Association Cookout

On Thursday, October 12th, The Florida Public Relations Association hosted a cookout for the entire campus at the Communication Department. "It was a great chance to get to know others in my department in a relaxed setting," said Sophomore Alexandra Gauthier. Students pigged out on hamburgers, hotdogs, and a variety of chips and soda. Everyone had a chance to learn more about the organization and the other clubs offered in the department by chatting with professors and students, including members of the Southern and Interlachen. "It was a lot of fun meeting new people and getting more involved with FSC activities," said Freshman Molly Gummin.

Out of all the activities that happen on FSC campus, the lip syncing contest was, by far, the most entertaining. With all the benefits of a karaoke contest and none of the ear drum splintering disadvantages, the contest was a truly delightful event.

Blood Brothers

Set in Liverpool, England in the 1980s, Blood Brothers follows twin brothers that grow up in two different worlds. FSC student Sarah Oroian starred as Mrs. Johnston, a financially burdened mother with too many children who decides to entrust one of her twins to her boss, a wealthy woman with no children. The two boys, portrayed by Kurt Poland as Mickey and Chris Corbin as Eddie, become fast friends but grow apart as they grow older and the true difference in their upbringing becomes more apparent. They never discover the truth of their brotherhood until just before one kills the other. The musical was performed in FSC's Buckner Theatre in early February.

Watermelon Bust

The Watermelon Bust that was hosted by Lambda Chi Alpha started out with a stomach churning watermelon-eating contest. The Over-Under watermelon pass race followed. Watermelons were thrust into the air, shoved under legs and barely caught as team members struggled to be the first to get their melon to the end of the line. To conclude the evening all the remaining melons were smashed on the ground and then hurled around in a chaotic fruit fight. The atmosphere changed from one of friendly competition to one of good-natured ferocity, as pink goop was launched in all directions, sparing nobody. The group of pink watermelon banshees then ran from the Intramural Field all the way to Lake Hollingsworth where everybody jumped into the water in an effort to return to normal color. According to Janel Keller, "The watermelon bust was an amazing way to end Derby Week."

Pep-Rally

Saturday, November 4, 2006 was a blustery evening where school pride swelled to the busting point. The Pop Your Pep pep-rally was an exciting display of what happens when a bunch of FSC students get together to celebrate their school. There was face painting, cheerleading, and Rated Next dancers that got the crowd energized and egged on their enthusiasm. The evening ended with a contest to determine which fan was best dressed to show their school spirit. The contest concluded in a tie where both students were given t-shirts and other FSC paraphernalia.

Shrimp Boil

The excitement at Friday night's shrimp boil was only exceeded by the great tasting food. As Family Weekend's first activity, it was definitely a noteworthy event. The dinner was complete with grilled chicken, garden salad, macaroni salad and garlic bread. Most exciting was looking around and seeing the countless happy faces of students with their families. Peel your own shrimp was a great quality for all. Families left with full bellies, and it was understood that the Shrimp Boil was a great showcase of Florida Southern College's hospitality.

Tom Harken Convo

On October 4, 2006, students had the pleasure of listening to Tom Harken speak of the value of education. Tom Harken told students of the many hardships he faced growing up, like dealing with the isolation and hardships of overcoming tuberculosis, polio, and being illiterate. Today, a self-made millionaire, Tom Harken encouraged students to be compassionate, and ended his speech by calling students to the stage to receive his key to success, a hug.

Every month, Dean Matt Thompson gathers with students over some yummy desserts to talk about what is on the student's minds. So far Spivey, Hollis, the JRB, and Jenkins have been the hot spot for students to taste of the delectable handmade desserts. To accommodate to the students busy schedule, Dessert with the Dean is held after hours to give the student a chance to take a study break.

Life and Cultural Center

The Life and Cultural Center provides a wide variety of educational, developmental and social programs for all students. These programs serve as a vehicle for the college community to learn about some of the many volunteer opportunities in the community and the many cultures that are a part of our Florida Southern College family. This includes targeting services for our minority students and international students.
In addition to administrative offices, the Life and Cultural Center is home to the Commuter Student Association, the Community Service Office, the Healthy Campus Coalition, the International Student Association and the Multicultural Student Council.

Residence Life

Living among your peers in a community of friends and fellow learners you will have the opportunity to do so much more than eat, sleep and study. You will have opportunities to become involved in residence hall programs, campus wide events, clubs, organizations and a wide variety of leadership opportunities. The Residence Advisors, or RAs, will guide you through your experience. The RAs are undergraduate students just like you. RAs are student leaders that receive training prior to the start of the school year and are supported by the professional staff members in the Office of Residence Life. Being a residential student is about more than having a place to sleep, it's also about community, leadership experiences, and fun!

Facilities and Maintenance

Ever wonder who keeps our dorms and classrooms so clean? Have you seen hard working men putting all of their time and effort into our beautiful campus. If you have then you must know that this is all the doing of the facilities and maintanance staff that offer their services to the students and faculty of FSC on a regular basis.

Can you believe another year has gone by? Can you believe we have another digital yearbook to be proud of? Oh, I can!! The stress from last year disappeared very quickly when Noa and I were so very fortunate to travel to Seattle for the yearbook convention. I learned so much, like how to keep organized with such a large project or how to make people happy (psychological sandwiches, I know the staff will get a kick out of that).
I love doing this. This whole experience has given me so much that I can walk away with and be proud to say that I learned that doing yearbook. I love that I have such talented people to work with and I love that I have so many different thoughts and ideas on how to do things thanks to them. If I didn't have such an open-mind, this book would be pretty pitiful. Besides, I'd probably scare a couple of people away too!
This has been a great experience and I am glad that I took the task. (Even though staying during spring break wasn't such an ideal thing for all, I'm glad we did.) So thank you for everything everyone has done and even though I wont be editor, I'll see you around next year!

Bob: You are still the greatest advisor ever. I know that even after I am gone from FSC, you will find a good person to be a great editor.
Noa: So, can you believe its over? All the ideas we came up with are here? Isn't it cool? And no stress this year like last year! And no late nights either! It's awesome! You got this under your belt; you know it like the back of your hands! I love it and you made it possible for me to believe it would be done. And it's done, so here's to you, Editor-in-Chief 2007-2008. Good luck, and I'll be here if you got any tough questions!
Cara: Another year of great videos! I am so glad that you have such a talented group to help you so you wouldn't stress like last year. You have such great talents and I know no matter what you do, you'll be stellar in it. Have a great summer and can't wait to see you in the fall!
Yeri: Your talent exceeds me, so thank you for being here all year and giving us some rockin' music!
Kaitlin: Wow, what a difference in positions from last year! But if it weren't for you and your crew of girls, we wouldn't have half of the pictures or copy for the book! You did a great job at keeping up with events, and good luck with next year!

Ariana: Your creative mind rocks! Thank you for all your help and great creative suggestions. Congratulations on graduating and good luck with your future plans!
Tasha: Thanks for taking the time and doing layout! I know those early mornings killed you during Spring Break, but its all worth it! Congrats on graduating!
Sara: Thanks for doing such a fantastic job on editing pictures. If it weren't for you, we wouldn't have the layout done as fast as we did!
Ashley: Having you on staff was such a delight. Not only did you do a good job at taking pictures, but you kept us all sane and laughing during some rough times. Thanks.
Leona: You have such great potential and I am glad that I got to see your work. Good luck with next year's layout. I hope that your creative thinking will take you far in life.
Joanna: Thanks for helping us this semester by editing copy! You did a great job under such pressure!
Jaci and Amanda: I know making phone calls or being so persistant was not on the description, but you did such an awesome job of getting those things scheduled for us or getting copy and names. Thank you!
Vicki: Thanks for letting me cry on your shoulder. You helped my family and me a lot and I am very grateful for that. Thanks again for taking a look over the book, and see you next year! (I can't believe I am graduating soon!)
Heather, Jeff, Krystal, Blake, Emily, Kate, Anabel, Jessica: Thanks for everything you did (and maybe you learned some cool stuff too?). I hope that you all come back and help Noa!

Sincerely,

Lish

"Often the editorial team will plan the content of the yearbook at the beginning of the year, though sometimes planning may begin the year before, or even left until just months or weeks before production – partly made possible by digital yearbooks."

We do all three.
